IN a forty-week season this year the Music '60 production staff, headed by Norman Sedawie, is producing 37 hour-long programs. That is roughly comparable in time to 16 or 17 Broadway musicals. Which is quite a chore.

We went across to Studio 7 in Toronto recently, to watch camera rehearsals for the Hit Parade segment of Music '60 (which alternates weekly with the Jack Kane segment). As we walked into the studio Bert Niosi staggered past carrying a trumpet, a flute, a trombone, a clarinet and a sax. It turned out that in one sequence he was the Wizard of Jazz and to prove it played all these instruments, consecutively and fluently.

Joyce Hahn, even smaller and more doll-like than she looks on screen, sat placidly on the lowest of the tier of audience seats. She seemed quite oblivious to the technicians rearranging the Klieg lights above her.

"When I heard we were doing an hour show I wondered how on earth we would fill sixty minutes. But somehow we seem just as rushed now as we were in the half-hour format." Joyce broke off as a group of girls in tights flooded past us onto the floor for their number.

"Tonight I've got four or five complete changes of costume," she went on. "I've got to make one change during a minute commercial."

We suggested well, anyway, there was not much of her to change. And later, during the dress rehearsal, we timed Joyce from the moment she finished a number, dressed in tights and a sort of green tunic affair, and darted out of the studio, till when she got back, this time in a kind of white ballgown arrangement: 54 seconds.

"The new format of Hit Parade is just fine," said Joyce. "We certainly got tired of singing Green Doors for 18 consecutive weeks, two seasons back."

The new format also seems to please Hit Parade's two million viewers, including the critics. "When we cut down on rock 'n' roll I thought we would get lots of complaints," said director Norman Sedawie, watching from the control booth. "But in fact we only got two or three."

Sedawie and his production staff also like the greater simplicity in sets of the new format. "We try for whiter, more airy sets," he said. "We now use on an hour-long show about as much scenery as we formerly used for a half-hour show. I think TV in general realizes it can't compete with Hollywood for spectacular sets."

The simplicity also appealed to Pete Seeger, well-known folk-singer, who sang Good Night Irene in casual dress with only the Gino Silvi singers as a very pleasant visual and musical background.

"I like the simplest music arrangements I can get," he told us during a break. "There are many different types of folksongs but the essential quality common to all is that anybody can sing them. No training is needed."

Pete sees folk music as a living process. "I like to take traditional elements of a folksong and sing them the way I feel them, which might mean rearranging the elements. I'd be sorry to see certain folk forms die out, but folk songs just cannot become museum pieces."

We watched Wally Koster for a moment, singing from the front porch "of a house." (Actually, there was no house, just the porch.) A photographer shot a still publicity picture just as Wally was holding on to the word "you." He kept on singing the tune but changed the words to: "Why do you always have to shoot when I'm singing o-o-o-o-o with my mouth all tied up and I don't like the way you breath either;" then continued on with the regular lyrics. The photographer looked a little startled.

We turned back to Pete. "I started folksinging 25 years ago," he said. "My father is a professor of musicology. He calls me a 'city-billy.' I left College in 1938, partly through lack of money and partly through lack of marks. I wandered round the States for two years learning folksongs from old timers . . . and here I am. Actually, I started out to be a journalist, not a singer at all."

We suggested he was well out of it.

"I can't agree," he said. "I go along with Bernard Shaw that journalism is the foundation of all good writing."

It seemed like a good note to leave on. Or rather: it seemed a good note on which to leave.

What makes a Delinquent ?

THE latest instrument in the fight against juvenile delinquency can be applied to first-grade moppets. More surprising is the fact that it can pick out, with 90 per cent accuracy, those with a delinquency potential!

Professor C. G. Gifford, Associate Professor at McGill University's School of Social Work, will explain the use of this new diagnostic tool as part of a special 60-minute study of juvenile delinquency on CBC radio's Trans-Canada Matinee on Tuesday afternoon. He will also interview offenders. Marion McCormick, free-lance broadcaster and CBC morning commentator in Montréal, will narrate the program and talk to those directly concerned with the problem.

Through interviews with juvenile delinquents themselves, social workers, judges of juvenile courts, probation officers, teachers, community leaders and other citizens, Professor Gifford and Mrs. McCormick will attempt to present this neglected but emotion-charged problem in its proper perspective.

Called the Glueck Social Prediction Scale, the new way of discovering the vulnerable child was published last summer. It is a by-product of 35 years of study of delinquency by world authorities Dr. Sheldon Glueck and his wife Eleanor, both professors at Harvard Law School.

Needless to say, the advancement will enable officials to warn parents and to keep a check on a child's development. An experimental Glueck test was tried by the New York City Youth Board in 1952 and the years since have afforded an opportunity to study its accuracy.

Naturally, the Glueck theory has met with resistance. This usually centres around the cry that a boy or girl will be branded for life. Professor Gifford's reply to such opposition is that the person can be helped before he gets into court and this in itself is most important. Furthermore, the professional people handling the case would maintain the same confidence one expects from a doctor.

The prediction scale has intrinsic advantages. It doesn't call for new material or new people. Probation officers and social workers can use it in their work after a couple of hours' study. It is also adaptable to any case—from a first-grader to a teen-ager. It looks for potential delinquency at the primary school level with an eye to nipping the trouble in the bud. In the case of the teen-age juvenile delinquent, the test could provide a judge with the underlying influences. Professor Gifford likens delinquency to a severe fever which could be gone tomorrow or represent the beginning of a fatal illness. This is where the diagnostic qualities of the Glueck method come into the picture. The scale is based on five factors in the family:

1. Affection of the father for the child.
2. Affection of the mother for the child.
3. Method of discipline by the father.

The Late Movies Have Been Lousy!

—according to some viewers, and CBC Winnipeg film director GRACE BROWN admits they haven't all been "four star" productions lately (although some have). She explains why—

Like Perry Como, we get letters—and they are not all complimentary. But then, since Perry's recent show on Winnipeg we are sure all his letters are not complimentary either. A great many of ours are on the subject of feature films and, since it is impossible to reply to every letter, we once more turn to the pages of the CBC Times to answer some of your questions.

The feature film situation is a complex one and is becoming more complicated daily. We would like to keep you advised as to the problems and solutions or compromises involved. With this in mind, we shall attempt to bring our viewers up to date on the situation.

You have likely read a good deal about the strike in Hollywood where the Screen Actors Guild and the Writers Guild of America have called their members out on strike until agreement is reached with the major film production studios for payment of residual rights on all films produced since 1948 when they are released to television. Other associations and unions are looking into the situation as they all want a fair share in the residuals. What all this means is simply that those individuals who worked on or appeared in feature films produced by the major studios since 1948 are asking for a percentage of the television revenue once the films are released. What it means to us, the viewers, is a delay on the release of these "post 1948 features" until such time as a fair agreement has been reached. This could take years. Meanwhile, the only post-1948 features available to television are those produced by small, independent companies. Some of these have been released and, indeed, have been telecast or are scheduled to be telecast over Channel 3, CBWT, Winnipeg. But, of course, the best of the post-48's are not available either in Canada or in the United States.

In the United States, nearly all American films produced prior to 1948 have been released to television. In Canada, this is not the case. The RKO features have not yet been seen on Canadian television and only a few Paramount pictures have been released. We expect to contract for these features as soon as they are made available. Perhaps by late summer or early autumn, some of these films will be telecast over Channel 3. At least, we hope so.

Another problem we have encountered is the reluctance of distributors to allow us selectivity when purchasing features. This is understandable when one realizes the situation in regard to the availability of feature films. At this moment, there is an anti-trust suit pending in the United States courts because certain producers refused to sell selected films to the television stations. They insisted the stations buy all the titles offered in any given package. The eventual outcome of this suit may take years; meanwhile, the stations have under contract a great many films which they cannot use. In Canada, the same situation prevails, but on a much smaller scale.

With the selection of available films becoming more and more limited, we are encountering real problems in scheduling. As a rule, there are not more than two prints of any feature in Canada. With 50 odd TV stations all clamouring for the better titles, we cannot always secure the film we would like on a certain date. Then, too, film is fragile and prints wear out quickly if not carefully projected. Often we have to reject a print for poor quality or condition and re-schedule the film when a new print is available. Sometimes it is impossible to procure a good print because of the condition of the negative. When a print is absolutely unusable, we have no alternative but to delete the title from our contract. But we assure you every effort is made to obtain an acceptable print of the really good features.

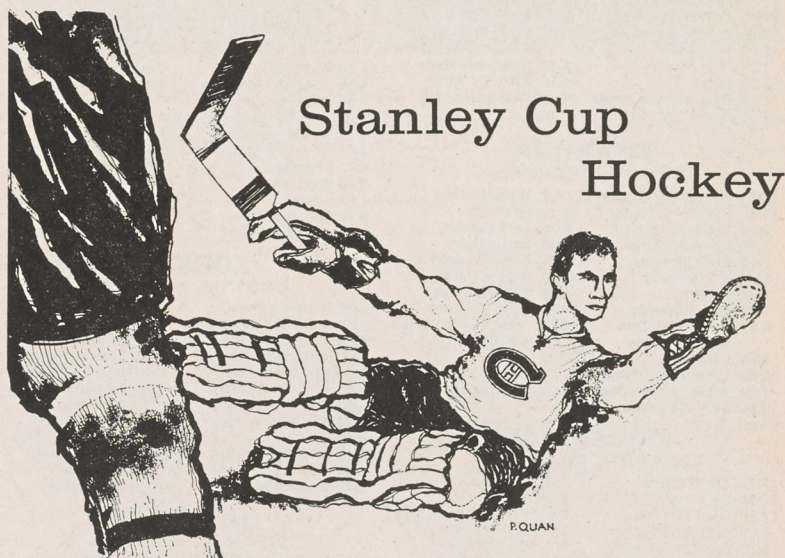

We have been told recently that some of our features are anything but good. We are the first to concede that not all our features are good — but a great many of them are three and four star productions. During the six years CBWT has been on the air, we have telecast approximately 2,700 feature films (including westerns). Between the years 1929 (when movies first "talked") and 1948, there were fewer than 200 exceptional features produced. Of these, many are between 20 and 30 years old and our tastes change. What was considered a fine drama 25 years ago, may seem comical today. By the same token, certain types of comedy appear almost tragic to our present audiences. Then, too, each individual reacts differently. What you may think is a fine feature, may seem a real "dog" to your next door neighbour. And so it goes.

We have some new product under contract now — 26 J. Arthur Rank features, 52 Columbia and Universal pictures and a selected few independent 1950 to 1956 releases. Starting in April, some of these will be appearing in our schedules.

One last point—we are ever striving to procure the very best features obtainable. Just as soon as more features are released in Canada, we expect to have them on the air.

Although this article was written by the film director at CBC Winnipeg, the problems described are faced by all television stations in Canada.—Ed.

GEORGE RETZLAFF, supervising producer of TV sports, look resigned but steadfast. "The other departments have been bugging me for weeks so they can make their own program arrangements, but I just don't know," he said. "Here—I'll try again."

He picked up the phone and dialed Maple Leaf Gardens without needing to look up the number. While he talked we read the gag notice above his desk: "Staff members with a death in the family will please advise the management before 11:00 a.m. on the day of the game."

Retzlaff hung up. "No," he said, "we won't know what games we'll be telecasting, or when, until the hockey people have made up their schedule. And they can't do that until the last minute."

At this stage we should explain for any newcomer to Canada that we were talking about the coverage of the Stanley Cup, North America's top hockey trophy. We should also warn the newcomer that he can expect a number of changes in CBC programming over the next few weeks.

It all began in 1893. Baron Stanley was the sixth Governor-General of Canada. During his term he got interested in hockey and just before he sailed for England sent ten guineas (maybe $50 in today's currency) to the Amateur Hockey Association to be used for a trophy.

G.M. Presents

"The Incredible World of Horace Ford," a drama by Reginald Rose, starring Alan Young. Horace Ford, beset by the problems of his workaday world as a toy designer and his responsibilities as a husband and the son of a widowed mother, has his greatest joy in childhood memories. He recounts them over and over again to anyone who will listen. On the eve of his 35th birthday, the pressures close in on him and he returns to Randolph Street, the slum area where he grew up and the scene of his happiest memories. To his horror, he meets "the kids" he used to play with—still there and still the same. "They were the kids I played with when I was ten—the same kids," he tells his wife, Laura. The resulting effect on Horace's personality as he retreats further and further into his "incredible world" provides the play with its baffling yet dramatic climax.

Today—"The Power of the Sea" will deal with the Continental Shelf, the area extending from the continents for a few hundred miles, which goes as deep as 500 feet. For countries whose laws have been based on the three-mile limit, there is the question of who controls this underwater area. The program will explore the riches of the ocean, making fresh water out of sea water, medical research using sea water, and off-shore oil. Famed French undersea expert Jacques-Yves Cousteau is interviewed, as well as Athelstan Spilhaus, Dean of the Institute of Technology at the University of Minnesota.

FARM AUCTION—At the right time of year, farm auctions can be the next best thing to a county fair—an opportunity to meet up with the neighbouring farmers and their wives, a day's outing for the children, plus the likelihood of picking up a bargain at the sale, so usually, little thought is given to the reasons for the auction. This filmed story covers the farm auction at Elm Grove Farm, owned by Jean and Tommy Tweed, forced to sell out through ill-health. At this

Saskatoon Station Wins TV Award

Prelude to Space, a twelve-week series produced by CFQC-TV, Saskatoon, has been awarded a gold medal by TV Radio Mirror of New York as the best public service program in Canada during 1959.

A CFQC-TV spokesman has stated: "Very recent pronouncements by the Board of Broadcast Governors have indicated in strong terms the responsibility that pertains to television licencees in respect of varied and imaginative programming. We here at CFQC-TV are particularly happy that one of our own productions should have been selected for recognition in this category."

The series was produced by Colin McLean and Jim Smith in co-operation with the Canadian Defence Research Board and the University of Saskatchewan. Photography was by John Lumby and Gerry Moir.

CBC Films For English Viewers

The recent sale of films of CBC-TV productions to the Granada TV Network of England, was the largest single export sale in the CBC's history—over $200,000.

The sale included the science series Web of Life, this year's Friendly Giant programs, the last two seasons' The Unforeseen productions, and all of this season's CBC dramas sponsored by General Motors.

CBC president J. Alphonse Ouimet, who signed the agreement with Granada chairman Sidney Bernstein, said that the sale will benefit a large number of Canadian authors and performers. Almost 50 per cent of the purchase price will be passed on to the writers and performers who contributed to these programs.

Purchase of the Web of Life series follows the excellent audience reaction in Britain to Granada's showing of the series, The Living Sea. Both series were produced in Vancouver and feature Professor Ian McTaggart-Cowan, professor of biology at the University of British Columbia.

Alan Jarvis

Starts Wednesday

THE RENAISSANCE

Rebroadcast of a three-part series by ALAN JARVIS, tracing the modern philosophy of life as it emerged in Italy during the 15th and 16th centuries, and of the period. (See note this page for details of first program) current significance of the event chosen. Part Two: Final program in the series "Where History Was Made." Today - "Through Hell's Gate." Much of this program will consist of a film specially made for British Columbia's centennial celebrations in 1958. The film shows a group of river-brigade men from Prince George duplicating as nearly as possible Simon Fraser's trip in 1808 down the Fraser River. The program also depicts the life of the hardy voyageurs, showing them making camp in the evening and preparing for the next day's arduous journey.

Friendly Giant

Rusty tries to fly a kite, and Friendly reads a book entitled "Fish in the Air", about a Chinese family named Fish and their kites and lanterns.

Art In Action

A technical survey of art movements and what they have taught us, with Professor George Swinton of the University of Manitoba.

R.C.M.P.

Today's episode - "Moonshine." Constable Frank Scott's work in solving an unusual "moonshine" case seems to pass unnoticed by his superior, Corporal Jacques Gagnier. Then comes a rare invitation.

Live A Borrowed Life

Anna Cameron, Elwy Yost, Bill Walker and a guest panelist try to identify the roles assumed by contestants. Charles Templeton is moderator.

Explorations

With Alan Jarvis as host. Presents the first in a three-part series which will trace the modern outlook on life

ESP Dramas Wednesdays On CBC-TV

Ivan Klapper, technical advisor for the drama series, One Step Beyond, which returned to CBC-TV March 16, has an unusual job: he attempts to disprove the stories submitted to the program's production staff.

One Step Beyond presents plays based on the experiences of persons who have ventured into the unexplained (but not unexplored) realm of ESP - extrasensory perception.

To date Mr. Klapper has investigated more than 1,000 cases of reported unusual occurrences.

as it emerged in Italy in the 15th and 16th centuries, and how the new concepts were reflected by the artists of the time. Today—"The Window." In the early Renaissance man learned to look at the world around him in a new way—a scientific way—and he began his systematic attempt to subdue it. This new outlook on nature and on life led inevitably to a new way of seeing the place of man in the universe, and to many of the basic questions and attitudes that dominate our own time. Through the drawings, paintings and notebooks of Leonardo da Vinci, scientist, inventor, philosopher and artist, this revolution in human history is illustrated.

Being funny is part of the business of finding out about life.—British radio and television comedian Tony Hancock.

Actor John Newland directs and narrates the series of plays about real-life experiences beyond the comprehension of the human mind.

"One Step Beyond doesn't try to prove anything," says Newland, "but simply explores the field of unexplained human experiences. We let our viewers draw their own conclusions or make their own explanations."

The stories deal with such phenomena as premonition (the warning of events to come), prescience (the revelation of things far away in either distance or time), possession (the invasion of the body of one person by the mind and soul of another), prior experience (the feeling, in a new situation, of "having been here and done this before"), and shared experience (linking two persons outside normal means of communication).

One Step Beyond is seen Wednesday nights on CBC-TV, replacing The Unforeseen.

Grown-ups often lose the sense of wonder and mystery in the world surrounding them. They get used to the moon sinking down behind the horizon, or rain falling from the sky. This is perhaps one of the important things which distinguishes the scientist from other people. He hasn't quite grown up in the normal, sober way. He still finds the world full of puzzles.—John Davy, science correspondent of "The Observer," on BBC.

Talent Caravan

George Murray with Ricky Hyslop and his orchestra present amateur and semi-professional talent from the stage of the Royal Theatre in Victoria, B.C. Contestants will include: musical comedy singer Ruth Champion; a pas de deux Ballet Group featuring Jane Bowering and Peter Kelch; accordionist Rine Korkonen; modern dancer Tiare Doherty, and The Pacers, a five man rock-and-roll group from Nanaimo headed by Terry Totzke. Winner of the previous week's show will be introduced.

Actually, there is some doubt as to whether today's trophy can be called the Stanley Cup: over the past sixty years people have polished it, replated it, given it a new base, and added to it so that it has grown to be two or three times the size of the original.

Still, the aura surrounding it remains the same. This aura was soon established. Back in 1905, for instance, a team of contenders made their way by dogsled and ship and train for over 4,000 miles from the Yukon to play for the cup. They lost.

A few years back the CBC received many compliments for the excellence of its camera work at hockey games. Today the compliments are fewer, not because the camera work has deteriorated but because its excellence is now accepted without comment. And that pleases George Retzlaff.

"Good camera work — in hockey or any other TV coverage — is camera work the viewer doesn't notice," he explained. "It means the viewer is seeing what he wants to see, smoothly, and at the time he wants to see it."

The CBC-TV pattern of hockey coverage was set back in 1952, the year television started in Canada on a regular basis. George Retzlaff was then a cameraman. He was soon made director for the hockey coverage though still officially in the technical department of CBC. Later he was made producer. As Supervising Producer, he will control the games in the Stanley Cup semi-final coverage.

"We hope to have four cameras covering the actual games with a fifth in the dressing rooms for interviews," Retzlaff explained. "Two of the cameras sit at the centreline. No. 1 is halfway up the stand and No. 2 right up on top. No. 1 is the workhorse covering most of the game. It has a zoomar lens. This allows us to zoom in on the players so the viewer can identify them, then move out again for the larger look at the pattern of play."

The zoomar is a good example of the need for smooth unobtrusive camera work. "If the cameraman zooms back too fast he leaves the viewers' eyeballs on the floor," said Retzlaff. "And viewers don't like that—it detracts from the game."

No. 2 camera, up on high, has a 25-inch lense which gives the viewer a close-up, particularly of play near the goals. This camera also catches the human-interest byplay, like fights, penalties, break-outs and so on.

No. 3 camera set in one of the corners gives a view of the play from a different angle. It can often give a better view of the passing pattern than the other cameras.

The fourth camera, on the opposite side of the rink to the other three, is set to get shots of coaches, players in the box, and other side-lights.

"The first requirement of a cameraman is that he know the game, said Retzlaff. For most TV work the cameraman has a list of shots required of him but of course you can't do that with a hockey game. So he must be able to anticipate what will happen next. If he sees a one or two-man break-out he must anticipate the movement of the wingers and to whom the pass will go."

Again unlike normal TV programs, each cameraman must treat his camera as if it were live throughout the game; that is, as the camera whose picture is being transmitted to the viewer. For the producer, sitting in the control booth, watches the output of all the cameras on all four monitors. He then calls for the camera which best gives the viewer the information he wants.

Commentators for the radio and TV simulcast will be—

For the Toronto Maple Leafs: Foster Hewitt (the man who gave the commentary on the first radio coverage of any hockey game over 37 years ago and who has done more than 5,000 games since then), and his son Bill Hewitt;

For the Montreal Canadiens: Danny Gallavan (who has been doing Montreal games since TV started there) and Frank Selke, Jr.

DELINQUENTS

4. Supervision by the mother.
5. Cohesiveness of the family.

Each of the above factors is defined and a system based on 100 points per factor is used to determine the score. For example, if the discipline is firm but kindly, the score would be roughly 9 out of 100 for this factor. If it was erratic with signs of severe cruelty, the score would be about 90 out of 100. On the other hand, if discipline is severe but the family relationship looks good, the result would probably be a low score or little tendency toward delinquency. Under the scale, a score of more than 250 means there is more than a 50 per cent chance of the subject becoming a delinquent.

Delinquency has social and psychological causes. Research has made it apparent that there is no single cause either in general or in respect to specific cases. A multiplicity of external and internal factors come together to influence the behaviour of the individual child. Professor Gifford is convinced, however, that we could cut down our delinquency rate substantially if we put our present knowledge fully to work.

The professor has made a good start himself by exploding some of the myths about delinquency. He comments on four of the more persistent of several statements which he claims are false, or at best, only half-truths:

1. TV, crime comics, etc., cause delinquency.

"The truth is that a youngster must be ready for illegal activity before he can be influenced by what he sees or reads. Because a prospective delinquent can be influenced, we need to control TV and other mass media but, at the same time, we should realize that these things cannot cause a youngster when he arrives, although her son is screaming in pain. Blind Dr. Harrison is forced to operate on the lad who has appendicitis, with Graham, who has been wounded in the arm, directing him.

ster to become a delinquent if he is relatively confident he can cope with his world."

2. Working mothers cause delinquency

"In the past 20 years, mothers have taken quite a beating about child-rearing in general and delinquency in particular. As social scientists learn more about serious delinquency, however, they are finding that a youngster's relationship with his father has more to do with it than his relationship with mother. This is true for boys and girls. There is no single cause of delinquency, but it looks more and more as though the focal point of all causes is the relationship of the father to a particular child. The fact that mother works has little or nothing to do with it."

3. Church-going prevents it.

"Ministers and church members frequently provide the trustworthy (Please turn to page 33)

Broadcasters Adopt New Training Plan

The television section of the Western Association of Broadcasters recently announced a plan to make "on-the-job" training at member stations available to new television licencees.

G. Blair Nelson, president of the Association, said that the member stations had formulated the plan because of their awareness of the shortage of trained TV personnel.

In the past, individual stations have offered their facilities for the training of new personnel of other stations, but it is believed that this is the first time that any group of broadcasters has worked out a training plan to assist new licencees.

Mr. Nelson, who is general manager of CFQC-TV in Saskatoon, pointed out that the new plan will not only benefit the operators of new stations, but will also make it possible for new employees to receive practical training as soon as they are engaged, without having to wait for the new stations to become operative.

To me the best form of entertainment is "King Lear" or "The Cherry Orchard" because it leaves the audience satisfied—with the feeling that they've learnt something which they didn't know before and recognize something about themselves which they didn't really recognize before. In that sense I think the theatre is for entertainment—Playwright John Mortimer, on BBC.

*A new 13-week series on

"Mr. Fix-It"*

Since Stan Leonard's first circuit triumph in 1957 Great Greensboro Open, he has been rated with the top golf professionals of the continent. course in basic golf on the CBC-TV network.

The series of 15-minute shows, which begins on April 2 (replacing Mr. Fix-It), was shot at Point Grey Golf Course in Vancouver. The commentator will be well-known CBC sportscaster Ted Reynolds.

Following is an outline of the programs:

1. Physical Qualifications and Basic Grip

Stan Leonard explains that anyone with a full set of limbs qualifies as a golfer from the physical standpoint, and no one has to be a giant to hit the long ball—which for many golfers just beginning seems to be their first desire. He also explains the basic grip for holding the clubs—the essential prerequisites for good play.

2. Club Size and Swing and Drive

Stress is laid on the golfer choosing the correct-sized club to insure accuracy. The necessity for good stance of body and feet to enable the golfer to drive accurately is emphasized.

3. Fairway Woods

Distinguishing between fairway woods, and the different types of stance suitable for varying terrain.

4. Long and Middle Irons

Golfers must have specific clubs for specific situations. The uses of 2, 3, 4 and 5 are explained.

5. Short Irons and Wedges

Explanations of the uses of irons 6, 7, 8 and 9 and particular attention to divot action.

6. Approaches and pitches

The approach to the green with the differences explained in the pitching on long flag and short flag greens and the running or dropping of a ball.

7. Fairway Bunker

The fairway and a study of sand irons and their purposes and a demonstration of the full swing for long shots from various lie situations.

8. Short Bunker

The edge of the green in short bunkers and how to play a notoriously tough shot—the buried ball.

9. Chipping

Chipping a ball from every conceivable lie situation onto the green.

10. Downhill, Uphill and Sidehill Lies

Stress in this lesson is on stance and footing on downhill, uphill and sidehill lies with varying situations of the fairway anywhere from tee to green.

11. Trouble Spots

Keeping out of the rough, water shots, deliberate slicing and hooking to circumvent hazards.

12. Putting

Stan demonstrates putting on the green with loop and angle putts.

13. Common Player Faults

Common faults including errors in basic swing correction and inadvertent hooking and slicing, and resume of previous programs.

Has something unusual ever happened to you? Are you a triplet? (That's unusual—it happens only once in more than 7,000 births.) Were you on the Titanic when it sank? Have you won the Irish Sweepstake?

On CBC Wednesday Night

"The Tin Flute"

The prize-winning novel by Manitoba-born author GABRIELLE ROY, adapted for radio by LEN PETERSON

"A SWARM of ragged children were playing on the sidewalks in the midst of refuse. Thin, sad-looking women appeared at evil-smelling doorways, blinking at the sunlight that lay among the garbage cans. Mothers with listless faces sat at the windows, giving suck to their babies. Everywhere there were windowpanes stuffed with rags or sealed with oiled paper. Everywhere there were shrill voices, the wailing of infants, or cries of pain coming from behind tight-closed shutters."

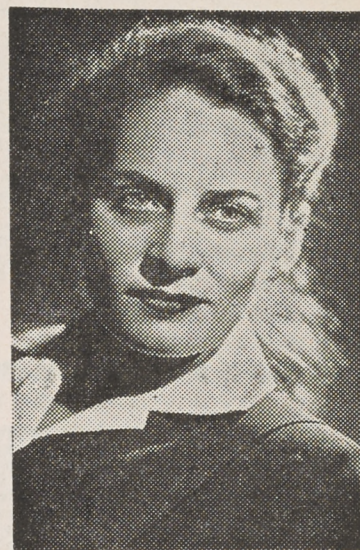

Saint-Henri, a railway-factory slum huddled beside the Lachine Canal in Montreal. The time: the first months of the Second World War. Out of its shabby restaurants, gaudy movie theatres and squalid homes Canadian novelist Gabrielle Roy plucked five ordinary characters and gave universal significance to their story of love and struggle for life just one jump ahead of destitution. They appeared in 1947 in her best-selling novel The Tin Flute. It won her the Prix Femina (she was the first Canadian writer to be awarded this major Parisian literary award), it was a Literary Guild book-club selection, and it was sold to the movies for $100,000.

The Tin Flute has been dramatized by Len Peterson for a radio presentation on CBC Wednesday Night this week. Production will be by Rupert Caplan in the Montreal studios.

This poignant, ironic drama concerns the large Lacasse family. Florentine, the oldest child, works as a waitress in the five-and-ten, where many men make advances to her—some flattering, some insulting. When Jean Levesque turns up at her counter one day with his bold black eyes and teasing smile, she thinks perhaps he offers an escape from the narrow misery of her life. As she struggles to reconcile her own happiness with Jean's burning ambition, her story unfolds as a penetrating study of human motives and emotions. The Tin Flute offers something quite new in heroines. Florentine is not noble, intelligent, pious, gorgeous, outstanding in any way. She is a skinny little thing with only the fleeting beauty of youth and the pitiful dreams of the trapped.

Equally interesting is the story of Florentine's mother, whose youth

Double Bill For Sir Ernest This Friday

This Friday afternoon's National School Broadcast provides an interesting introduction to the man who will conduct the CBC Symphony Orchestra broadcast the same evening. Susan Fletcher will interview Sir Ernest MacMillan in the third of four Canadian Artists programs.

Sir Ernest will tell of some of the interesting experiences that led him to choose music as a career when he was a young boy in Toronto — and how he found it possible to combine his other boyhood interests with his interest in music.

What he does not tell is that he was considered a child prodigy and that he continually amazed church congregations and concert audiences with his organ playing when he was only ten or twelve.

As a young man, Sir Ernest spent a number of years in Europe, studying and working with some of the great teachers and musicians of the day. In 1914 he was attending a music festival in Germany when the First World War broke out. He was interned as an enemy alien and spent four years in a prisoner-of-war camp.

After his return to Canada he soon made an international reputation as an organist, composer and conductor, and educator. In 1932 he was appointed conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, a position he held until his retirement 25 years later. Sir Ernest was knighted by King George V in 1935 for his contributions to music.

On the National School Broadcast Sir Ernest will recall some of the memorable incidents of his career, mention some of the personal friendships he has made, and tell stories of some of the world's greatest performers with whom he has worked.

Part of the program will consist of a performance of Sir Ernest's A Saint Malo, a sketch for string orchestra, based on a French-Canadian song.

MATINEE HIGHLIGHTS

Chatelaine Chez Canada. Madame Georges P. Vanier, wife of Canada's Governor-General, talks to Ottawa journalist Charles Lynch about her life as the wife of a distinguished soldier, diplomat and statesman who has served Canada in many countries, about her family, and about her contributions to human welfare through her work with the Red Cross and the St. John Ambulance voluntary aid department. (Repeated from Trans-Canada Matinee 27/3/60).

Countess of Aberdeen. A former chatelaine of Rideau Hall, Lady Aberdeen, resided there when her husband was Governor-General, from 1893 to 1898. She founded the Victorian Order of Nurses, the National Council of Women, and the May Court Club in Ottawa. Her diaries have recently been placed in the Canadian archives and from them Lita Rose Betcherman, Ottawa club woman and freelance broadcaster, has gleaned a character study of this somewhat formidable woman. (Repeated from Matinee 10/3/60).

The Bronte Legend. Three more famous women, the literary Bronte sisters, and the house in which they lived in the cobbled village of Haworth on the lonely Yorkshire Moors are the subject of this sentimental journey by Pamela Lee. This week — "Pitlochry." Arthur Bush takes listeners this week to Pitlochry, a lively little town right in the middle of Scotland. For many years, Pitlochry has been a centre for holiday makers who can enjoy the fishing and golf there, as well as the lovely scenery of the valley of the river Tummel, where the town lies. Since 1951, Pitlochry Festival Theatre, with its summer season of plays, concerts and art exhibitions, has drawn thousands more visitors from all over the world. Scotland's most famous products are, perhaps, whiskey and tweed, and at Pitlochry, Arthur visits a local distillery and a mill where the wool is prepared for tweeds. He also meets some of Pitlochry's local talent, who entertain him with traditional Scottish songs and music.

Fashion. Olive Dickason, woman's editor of The Weekly Globe and Mail in Toronto, has been bringing Matinee listeners a description of spring's new fashions. Mrs. Dickason, who has twice won awards for her reporting from the Canadian fashion industry, talks about North American fashions generally and their adaptation to the Canadian scene.

In My Opinion. Canadian law and public opinion have always conceded that parents shall decide upon prescribed medical treatment for their children. Occasionally in recent years, children seriously ill for whom blood transfusions have been prescribed by attending doctors have been denied the transfusions because of the religious beliefs of their parents. In some instances, the courts have given temporary custody of these children to Children's Aid societies so that the transfusions could be administered. Controversy has resulted. In this Matinee "In My Opinion", a group of Vancouver men and women debate the rights of parents.

Come Into The Garden. Should you plan your garden for yourself, your friends and your family? Or is it a showplace to be admired by the neighbours and passers-by? Mary Ferguson, well-known Montreal gardener and Matinee's favourite speaker on this earthy subject, discusses the two aspects of gardening in the second of her current series.

keeps coming back to haunt her. But her zest for living and hope for her family keep bubbling up to overcome some of her regrets and most of the grim darkness of her life.

The challenge of wartime problems draws on the energies of these struggling people like a second wind. It brings a new excitement and meaning into their lives, and government checks rescue them from squalor.

Miss Roy writes of people rather than social problems. Reviewing the book in the Toronto Globe and Mail, William Arthur Deacon wrote: "Everything in The Tin Flute, and every person, is unremarkable, yet the patience, the skill of phrasing, of steering the story from point to point, gives this novel power that captivates the imagination of readers. Here are the common people in their misery. Here are their pitiful sorrows and joys. This young writer has understood what they are, what they think, how they feel; and she makes her readers share those revelations. This makes the book a Alberta. This week—"The Torch of Greek Thought." It has been said with truth that the Greeks founded Western philosophy and Western science. Time will not permit more than a glimpse of the pro-Socratic thinkers, the first exponents of the restless inquiring mind. The lecture will concentrate its attention on Plato and Aristotle, the "giants of Greek philosophy" and will then give a brief summary of Epicureanism, Stoicism, and Cynicism, three philosophical systems which made a strong impact on the Romans.

work of art. Consequently, even the minor characters will be remembered and quoted."

Except that it has a tougher fibre, The Tin Flute may remind listeners of A Tree Grows in Brooklyn. Miss Roy matches the most refined feeling with the most accurate, tangy language. She writes warmly and affectionately of the poor and unemployed of Saint-Henri, but her sentiment is unsalted by tears. There is no melodrama in her book. Her characters are all normal.

She got her knowledge of them first-hand. Early in the war she roomed in Saint-Henri when she was short of funds, and used to spend hours walking through the streets, watching and listening to the little human dramas being played out in its sooty, noisy shops and houses. It was just after her return from France, and she was earning her living writing for French-Canadian periodicals and devoting two or three months each year to her novel. It appeared first in French, under the title of Bonheur d'Occasion.

Miss Roy is not Quebec-born, but comes from an old pioneer family in St. Boniface, Manitoba. She is the youngest of eight. She taught school for a while, but found it "empty and dreary," so got into theatricals with Le Cercle Moliere, while she saved for a trip to Europe. She had been writing short stories in both French and English since she was 12. She studied dramatics in London and Paris, and toured Southern France on foot before returning to Canada and getting to know Saint-Henri and its people. Since her success with The Tin Flute she has written two other novels: Where Nest the Water Hen, and The Cashier.

THE ACTING MORSES ON "PROJECT '60"

The story of one of Canada's leading acting families will be told on Project '60 this Tuesday. "Bow Bells to Broadway" follows the career of Barry Morse from London, England, where he was born, to Canada, where he has been working for the past nine years. With Mr. Morse, above, are his two children, 14-year-old Melanie and 12-year-old Hayward. Inset—Mrs. Morse, who performs on the stage as Sydney Sturgess.

The Barry Morse story Tuesday on "Project '60"

THE Barry Morse story is a little like Eliza Doolittle's. He was born a cockney with an accent as thick as a London pea-souper. Now he speaks as impeccably as any Englishman could hope to. The only trace of his cockney heritage is in his quick movements, his shrewdness, and his wit.

Morse was born in Bethnal Green, a London slum district, over the shop where his dad sold tobacco, newspapers and off-licence beer. His parents never saw a play in their lives, and when Barry left school at 14 to become an errand boy for a glass bottle manufacturer at 15 shillings a week, none of them had the slightest interest in the theatre. Wheeling about London on his bike, Barry picked up the news that Lord Leverhume on his deathbed had endowed an annual scholarship at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. What interested the lad particularly was the fact that it was worth four times what he was making as a delivery boy — fabulous riches! Then he learned that there was to be a public Academy performance, and he went round to see what this acting stuff was all about. It was his first visit to a theatre, his first glimpse of that other world that was to dominate his life from then on.

With impudent assurance he told himself he could do better than any of those blokes up on the stage, and boldly decided to enter the men's competition for the scholarship. He was just 15, competing with 200 others, "and looking back on it now, I marvel at my audacity!" he recalls. He was told he would have to prepare two scenes to perform. Never having read a play he skinned round to the public library to see what he could find in the drama section. Having a liberal inheritance of cockney wisdom, he chose a scene from Galsworthy's The Silver Box—the cockney navvy testifying on a witness stand. Then he began looking around for something a little more lad-dee-dah, and when his eyes lit on the posh-sounding name of Algernon in Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest, he knew he had found what he wanted.

He won. Sybil Thorndyke was one of the judges, and years later she told him that the effect of the skinny young cockney playing the dandy's part was unbearably funny, but also rather poignant, because he was so sincere. Morse was the youngest student ever to enroll at the Academy. During his two years there he worked hard at shedding his cockney accent, listening carefully to his fellow students, among them Joan Greenwood and Pamela Brown.

At the end of his course he played the title role in Henry V before King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in coronation year, and won a BBC award for his radio acting. Then he toured for five years with various road companies, during which he met and married Sydney Sturgess, another repertory player. He acted in over 200 roles, two performances a day, sometimes two plays a week—a rugged apprenticeship that undermined his health and sent him off to a TB sanitarium for seven months.

When he was fit again he made his London's West End debut in The First Mrs. Fraser, which starred Dame Marie Tempest and A. E. Matthews and ran for nine months. After that he had his ups and downs for a while and then a run of stage successes, including the title role in Irwin Shaw's The Assassins. He made 15 films, and became a well-known radio and TV actor.

In 1951 the Morses and their two children came to Canada to visit Sydney's relatives—and stayed. Now Morse is as close to being a radio-TV-stage star as it is possible for an actor to be in Canada. His face and voice probably are more familiar to Canadian audiences than any other performer's. And he has had two Broadways flings—a flop and a success. Recently his experiment with a one-man show, a combination of lecture and concert, got enthusiastic reviews. He is planning a one-man spectacular along similar lines for CBC-TV next year, and when time permits he hopes to arrange a tour.

Sydney Sturgess, too, has chalked up many fine performances on stage, radio and TV in this country, and the Morse children—Melanie, 14, and Hayward, 12, are the busiest youngsters in television these days. Hayward was seen recently with Ingrid Bergman in The Turn of the Screw, and with Maurice Evans in The Browning Version.

You will meet them all on CBC radio this Tuesday night when Project '60 presents Bow Bells to Broadway, the story of what makes an actor. Toronto actress Antoinette Bower, who has prepared this hour-long visit with the Morses, points out that she makes no effort to present them as the folks next door. They're theatrical people through and through, she says, and that's how you will find them.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

At The United Nations. A report on this week's activities at the United Nations. Kathleen Teltsch is U.N. correspondent for The New York Times and contributes regularly to Matinee.

Arthur Phelps. Matinee's favourite philosopher, critic and iconoclast, with another of his tart contributions to amuse and provoke his listeners. Arthur Phelps is now living in Kingston, Ontario and lecturing at Queen's University.

She Makes Music At The "Met." Every opera singer dreams of a season at New York's famed Metropolitan Opera; not all can make their dreams come true. One who did, not long ago, is Theresa Stratas, a Toronto soprano. Miss Stratas studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto and with Irene Jessner, a former Metropolitan Opera soprano. In this interview with another former "Met" soprano, Ruby Mercer, Miss Stratas talks about her "Met" debut, about her career and her hopes for the future. Miss Mercer is well-known to Matinee listeners as a hostess in the music room where she has played many of her favourite records and talked about music and musical personalities.

Daily features . . . News commentary by Anne Francis of Ottawa, recorded music by Robert Van Dine of Ottawa, and another reading by Diana Maddox from Charlotte Bronte's "Villette", adapted for radio by Sally Creighton.

NATIONAL SCHOOL BROADCAST

Part I—Commonwealth Roundup. Today — "Australian Shell Fisher." Australia and the islands off its coast supply a large part of the world market in oyster shell, which is used for making buttons and jewellery. This broadcast takes us to Thursday Island just off the north-east tip of Australia. There the skipper of a pearl-shell boat talks about the fleet—a mixture of ketches, converted torpedo boats and regular fishing craft. We are introduced to a diver who describes his working life under the ocean. We get a glimpse of the strange, silent world under the surface, and hear about some of the creatures which live there.

Part II—Canadian Artists. Today—"Sir Ernest MacMillan." This great Canadian conductor tells of some of the interesting experiences that led him to choose music as a career when he was a young boy in Toronto. Sir Ernest reviews some of the memorable incidents of his career in music, and with a few musical illustrations he reminds listeners not only of the beauty to be found in music, but also of the fun there can be in the making of music.

W-3:00 pm K-2:00 pm X-2:00 pm

POST-NEWS TALK

Every year about this time we read about the revolutionary changes we can expect in our automobile engines "five years from now." Oddly enough, John Irwin points out, it's already been "five years from now" several times over, but what have we got? Not quite the same engines, certainly, but none of the revolutionary magic so often promised. However, just to keep us up to date, Irwin describes some of this year's prophecies for— you guessed it—"five years from now."

Manitoba Winter Fair On CBC Radio, TV

Reports on activities at the Manitoba Winter Fair at Brandon will be carried on CBC radio and TV this week. Part of the Manitoba Farm Broadcast (12:15 p.m. on CBW) will originate from the Brandon Arena Monday to Thursday. A special 25-minute report on fair activities will also be heard Monday to Thursday at 7 p.m. on CBW, in the last 25-minute segment of "Tempo." The CBC Farm Club on Saturday morning will deal with youth activities at the fair. A special "live" television program will originate from the Brandon Arena Friday night on CBWT and CKX-TV. The Winnipeg station will carry a full hour of this program; the Brandon station will carry the first half-hour of it. This program will be filmed for presentation the following Sunday (April 3) on private stations wishing to carry it. CKX-TV will carry a special local half-hour program from the fair at 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

adult relationship a troubled youngster needs. It is this sense of belonging to the community through a church, rather than merely attending services every Sunday, which can have an effect in preventing delinquency."

4. Recreation prevents it.

"We have more facilities for recreation now than we ever had, yet our delinquency rate is slowly rising. Recreation has tremendous value and we all need it, but the evidence we have indicates that the great majority of present and future delinquents are already in athletic leagues and sports programs or on the fringes of them."

These views will help set the pace for the CBC broadcast under the direction of program organizer Helen Carscallen and Montreal producer Margaret Howes.

The McGill University professor has had plenty of opportunity to observe offenders. As counsellor to the Bathurst Community Club in Toronto, he spent 15 months working with the so-called "Beanery Boys." He also spent two years as program director at Toronto's Central Neighbourhood House and five years as director of group activities at Norton Psychiatric Clinic in Louisville, Kentucky. Besides his present work at McGill's School of Social Work, he is consultant to Montreal's Mental Hygiene Institute.

In defense of teen-agers, who often feel very much maligned by the blanket of criticism cast upon them, Professor Gifford points out the fallacy that delinquency is a teen-age problem, the myth that all teen-agers are delinquents at heart. This image is unfair and dangerous.

"It is true that delinquency appears most frequently in the 'teens,'" says the professor, "but these anti-social youths are a small minority and their attitudes are not contagious. A person in good physical health can withstand an experience that would give a sicklier person pneumonia—and the same is true for emotionally healthy teen-agers. Most of them will not develop anti-social attitudes from contact with those who have them. Delinquency is only contagious among those few youngsters who are susceptible."

TV Violence

• I am not a letter writer, but what is one to do? If I make no comment about the Mike Hammer show you must conclude that I accept it. But I don't. I am in open rebellion against it. It is cruel, beastly cruel, even sadistic. It doesn't belong to the Canadian scene, and it doesn't even have the saving relief of a moral.—Rev. W. E. Donnelly, Fort Garry, Man.

• I wish to take strong exception to the type of program exemplified by Mike Hammer on March 6. It was a spectacle of sadism and brutality for its own sake. I have no objection to realism. But this was an example of horrifying behaviour—and committed by a supposed sympathizer of just causes. On that basis one can only draw the conclusion that this type of behaviour is offered as an acceptable mode, because wasn't it Mike, the "good guy", who jumped on an adversary's body with both feet? Please take this adult psychopathic delinquent away. He's too sadistic for my tastes.—Mrs. H. P., Winnipeg.

Radio Fan

• I confess that I am behind the times (and the pun is intended), because I still prefer a good radio program to a poor television production. May I ask two favours as a reward for long and faithful listening? First, can you spare a little space in Sunday's radio notes to advise us what is on CBC Stage. I want to know what is being offered so I'll have a good excuse for not watching Jack Benny or George Gobel. Second, now that housewives have been exposed to programs like Fighting Words and Court of Opinions and have presumably recognized their worth, could we people who have only evenings for listening please have some of them back? Surely you wouldn't want us to be driven for relaxation to such inanities as TV offers us in shows like Perry Como, R.C.M.P., and Riverboat.—Miss M. H., Prince Albert, Sask.

Bishop Sheen

• We would appreciate your giving serious consideration to the return of Bishop Fulton Sheen's program, This is the Life. I'm sure it would add much to your present programming.—The Christian Family Movement, Fort Garry.

• I understand that NBC-TV is again carrying a series of lectures by Monsignor Fulton Sheen, and would like to request that CBC give consideration to bringing the new series to the Canadian audience as soon as possible.—Miss H. A. O., Winnipeg.

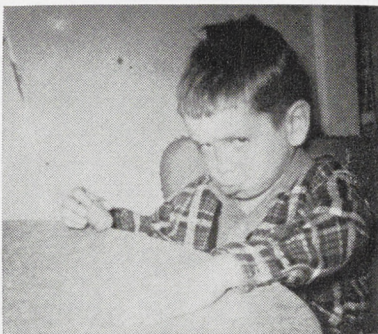

It is true that "Life is Worth Living" is being shown on some U.S. stations, but it is a commercial series, and CBC policy (which is endorsed by the National Religious Advisory Council, representing all the major denominations) does not permit commercial sponsorship of religious programs. Although the CBC cannot, therefore, negotiate commercially with the sponsor of this program, it has offered the Roman Catholic Hierarchy free national network time (in the "Good Life Theatre" series) for the presentation of Bishop Sheen's programs. The Hierarchy, which will have to make its own arrangements with the company handling the series, has the CBC's offer under consideration.

Ford Startime

• What a delightful evening of drama we had with the play The Importance of Being Earnest! It seems almost unjust to single out any one actor, but since we always enjoy Toby Robins in Front Page Challenge and saw Edward Mulhare in My Fair Lady it was almost like meeting old friends.—Mrs. B. S., Regina.

Dejected

• This—

was when Mighty Mouse Playhouse didn't show last Friday.—K. Kennedy, Winnipeg.

Young People's Concerts

• There is no program that has offered more enjoyment to me than the Young People's Concerts with Leonard Bernstein. This is a program that makes having TV worthwhile. I hope that this feature will be a regular one each year. It is interesting, inspiring, and beautiful. Many of us, living in small towns, miss the luxury of being able to go to concerts of this calibre, and do so enjoy and appreciate a series such as this on TV. Thank you! Please renew my subscription. I thought I could do without the CBC Times, but find it just doesn't work out that way.—Mrs. E. P., Outlook, Sask.

There will be another Young People's Concert this Saturday. See page 19.

Late Movies

• The late movies that we have been forced to watch lately stink. I'm sure that there are plenty of movies made in the last 15 years that we could enjoy, instead of the static and nonsense we have to endure. I don't suppose you know how many viewers of these take-offs on Movie Museum are going to bed early these days.—Mrs. A. S., Winnipeg.

• We have just received our copy of the CBC Times for March 13-19 and are disappointed to see that the names of the movies on Siesta Cinema (CFRN-TV, Edmonton) have not been given. We do hope that you will list the names again as we cannot watch these plays very often; but if we know of one that interests us we can occasionally plan our work accordingly.—D. B., Bittern Lake, Alta.

CBC cannot speak on behalf of any private stations, but it may be that they are experiencing the same scheduling difficulties as CBC. If this is the case, the comments by Grace Brown, film director at CBC Winnipeg, may be pertinent. See page 4.

Happyland

• I am writing to say how sorry our household was when Happyland went off the air. In all our viewing, for five years in Vancouver, two years here in Penticton, we cannot recall a TV show that gave us so much enjoyment. Winnipeg is to be congratulated on having such wonderful talent. May we suggest that you make every endeavour to bring back Happyland, but for a full hour.—C. E. H., Penticton, B. C.
